HEALTH WORK IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Sanitary Conditions to Be Standardized as Result of Conference.

As a result of a conference between the educational and health forces of Virginia yesterday, the work of school sanitation will be standardized with a view to getting accurate information as to conditions. The conference, which was called by State Health Commissioner Ennion G. Williams, was held in the offices of the State Board of Health, on Capitol Street.

Those in attendance were Commissioner Williams, J. D. Eggleston and R. Stearns, the retiring and incoming superintendents of Public Instruction; Dr. Binford, executive secretary of the Co-operative Education Association; Jackson Davis, supervisor of health in the University of Virginia; Allen W. Coleman, Assistant State Health Commissioner; Dr. Roy K. Manning, Director of Health Inspection and Richard Messer, State Sanitary Engineer.

It was determined that the State Health Department shall prepare and distribute a card index system to be kept in all schools. These cards will contain blanks for ratings in the matters of sewerage, sanitation, lighting and heating. Each school in the State will be so listed, and the information to be gotten in the future from local school officials through the operation of the Department of Public Instruction. Besides, at the conference, it was decided that the State Health Department will make inspections by Dr. Flanagan and others.

This way the sanitary needs and conditions in the schools will be standardized, affording a basis for educational health work. Health an educational work will be a result, he in better condition to conduct their campaign.

Sanitary school outhouses are reviewed as one of the greatest motives in the cause of public health in the State.

STATE ACCOUNTANT

WILLIAM FRANKLIN SMYTH.

SMYTH WILL GET STATE SENDS OUT M'CARTHY'S PLACE ITS ANNUAL DUNS

Expert Bookkeeper to Become State Accountant—McCarthy Resigns.

After a service of two years and six months, Captain Carlton McCarthy yesterday morning resigned the office of State Accountant. He is effective at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the business hour for State offices. Tomorrow Captain McCarthy will enter upon his new duties as a member of the Administrative Board of Richmond.

It is generally expected that Governor Mann will to-day appoint William Franklin Smyth for the unexpired term of about eighteen months. McCarthy is no opposition to Mr. Smyth, who is generally indorsed for the position by the members of the Joint Auditing Committee, by State officials and accountants everywhere. Probably few appointments could be made in response to such a universal desire and expectation.

Since April 1 of this year, Mr. Smyth has been Captain McCarthy's assistant, and has been active in the discharge of the duties which have devolved upon him. He has had long and intimate experience in State accounting, having the fiscal affairs of the Commonwealth at his fingers' ends.

In 1884 he entered office under the late Colonel Morton Mayne, when that old soldier became Auditor of Public Accounts. He was speedily made general bookkeeper, retaining the position for six years. In 1890 Mr. Smyth entered other employment, but in 1905 he was sent for by Auditor Moore and asked to take the position of head bookkeeper, which he accepted, and in which capacity he served until his resignation this year to take the place in the accountant's office.

Mr. Smyth put into effect the methods now in use in the Auditor's office, by which the Commonwealth strikes a daily balance each afternoon, just as is done in banks. He was designated by Governor Swanson to put in a modern system of bookkeeping in the office of the Second Auditor, to which service he was detailed for several months.

He is a citizen of Washington County, in the Southwest, and always goes to Abingdon at election times to discharge the obligations of citizenship. He lives on East Grace Street, this city.

STANTON WILSON

Exact Words Which Have Set All Virginia Politicians Talking.

TO WHOM DID HE REFER?

Opponents of the Organization Take Speech to Mean War on the Ring.

"That government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection and security of the people, nation or community; of all the various modes and forms of government there is no one so capable of securing the greatest degree of happiness and safety, and is most effectually secured against the danger of maladministration; and, whensoever the government shall be found inadequate or contrary to these purposes, a majority of the community hath an undoubted, inalienable and indefeasible right to reform, alter or abolish it in such manner as shall be judged most conducive to the public weal."

The above declaration, constituting Section 2 of the Virginia Bill of Rights, was the reference made by President-Elect Woodrow Wilson in his after-dinner speech at Staunton Saturday night in exalting Virginians who opposed him for the nomination. That speech still constitutes practically the sole topic of conversation in political circles in the city and State.

Governor Wilson did not say who it is in Virginia who entertained opinions of government contrary to those set forth in the declaration of the Bill of Rights, nor did he make specific application as to time or place. Therefore, he has left the people guessing.

Says It's Railroad Man.

He said in the outset of the part of his speech referring to Virginia that there were men "I dare say one of them is present to-night"—who had been afraid of him. The Baltimore Sun's representative now guesses that this was not a reference to Congressman H. D. Flood, as was generally supposed, but to a railroad president, who has recently changed his mind about Wilson's policies.

But Governor Wilson's reference a moment later to the lack of enthusiasm for him in the Virginia delegation at Baltimore, would seem to indicate that he had not then in mind railroad magnates, for they were not in the delegation.

Speculations continue to be general. Nearly everybody believes that Governor Wilson had in mind a reproof or a warning to Virginians, serving notice that he expects hearty support for his policies, and that he will accept no opposition. There are those who believe he intends a war on the Virginia Democratic organization as now led.

Senator Martin did not go to Staunton, and, as the Baltimore correspondent says, "showed no disposition whatever to get on the Wilson band wagon." Senator Harrison was on hand, as was Mr. Flood, but neither being in the reception committee, since Staunton is his own district.

Objection and Approval.

Many criticisms are to be heard on the subject of the speech, those who disapprove what Mr. Wilson said, thinking that it was hardly the thing to criticize one's host over the latter's own ringing table.

A public opinion yesterday called attention to another section of the Bill of Rights, that "any citizen may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, and that no subject shall be liable to punishment for his speech, writings or publications."

"Mr. Wilson," he said, "should remember that other people have the right to their own opinions, even if his feelings are so sensitive that he cannot stand the sight of them. He should not forget that no one should possess opinions but a party candidate should not bring forth public criticisms of other people's policies."

On the other hand, the opponents of the organization are rejoicing, feeling that Governor Wilson is preparing to try to put that out of business.

His Ignorance Words.

The stenographic report of this part of Governor Wilson's speech, as taken by his secretary, is as follows:

"There are certain sentences I dare say one of them is present to-night—who have frankly told me that there was a time when they were afraid of me, because they thought I had some screw loose or that I was rather wild. For example, Virginia herself, in the convention, showed no great enthusiasm for my nomination. But these gentlemen now say that in view of things that I have said since I was nominated—which are exactly the same things that I said before I was nominated—they are no longer afraid of me. By which I draw the conclusion: that they did not read the things I said before I was nominated, and that after I was nominated it became known to them that I was really not so much afraid of them as they thought I was."

and the beginning of a principle that will last a lifetime came to our notice a few days ago, when a young lady deposited in our Savings Department the twenty-five dollar bill which the firm that employs her gave for a Christmas present.

She asked us to arrange so that it would be impossible for her to withdraw it within a year—in other words, she asked us to protect her from herself, and we are going to do it.

NARROW ESCAPE WHEN POLE FALLS

Miss Gold Sustains Painful Injuries When One Is Snapped Off by High Wind.

Miss Mary E. Gold, eighteen years old of 416 West Main Street had a narrow escape from death yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, when a telegraph pole in Venable Street near Eighteenth was snapped at its base by the high wind which prevailed and struck her on the head and shoulders. In its fall the pole hit a fence, which prevented its entire weight crushing the young woman.

Miss Gold had just alighted from a street car and was going to the office of the Westmoreland Candy Company, 608 North Seventeenth Street, when the accident occurred.

The pole had decayed at its base and was unable to withstand the heavy gale and broke off. It caught her almost squarely on the head and knocked her to the pavement.

Several persons hurried to her assistance, and she was taken into a nearby drug store. She soon regained her faculties and requested that Dr. J. Palmer Bright, her family physician, be summoned. He responded to the hurried call and removed her to her home in a taxicab. Her injuries consisted of cuts and bruises about the head and shoulders.

The question of the ownership of the pole is already disputed. It was, it is understood, erected by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, but lately has been used to carry wires of the signal system of the Fire Department or the city is responsible for the accident is a matter which will be determined by the courts.
